The Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) is the principal fact-finding agency of the Federal Government in the field of labor economics and statistics. It develops and publishes regular data on employment, unemployment, prices, productivity, and economic well-being of the American public. The Bureau of Labor Statistics is the statistical agency of the government that produces price indices, including the Consumer Price Index (CPI) and Producer Price Index (PPI); labor market statistics, including unemployment and joblessness rates; and other data, including productivity and unit labor costs, that are used by policymakers, employers, and employees in making economic decisions. The Bureau of Labor Statistics also collects the Producer Price Index (PPI) and Consumer Price Index (CPI), which are used to calculate inflation rates. The Consumer Price Index (CPI) measures the average change in prices paid by urban consumers for a market basket of consumer goods and services. The Producer Price Index (PPI) measures the average change in selling prices received by domestic producers for their output. The Bureau of Labor Statistics provides a wide range of data, including labor market statistics, productivity data, and other economic indicators. The Bureau of Labor Statistics is responsible for collecting and analyzing data on employment, unemployment, prices, productivity, and economic well-being of the American public. The Bureau of Labor Statistics has been collecting data for over a century and has a rich history of providing economic information to policymakers, employers, and employees.
